Sultanpur Lodhi

Sultanpur Lodhi is a significant town in Punjab, India, deeply intertwined with Sikh history. Sultanpur Lodhi holds great importance in Sikhism as it is the place where Guru Nanak's spiritual journey began, laying the foundation for the teachings of Sikhism. The town is home to many historical sites, including the Gurdwara Ber Sahib, which marks the spot where Guru Nanak Dev Ji had his first divine revelation.

Sultanpur Lodhi also played a key role in the spread of Sikh teachings. Guru Nanak Dev Ji's journey from this town helped him establish the core principles of Sikhism, which include devotion to one God, equality, and service to humanity. The town continues to attract thousands of pilgrims each year, who come to experience the deep spiritual significance that Sultanpur Lodhi holds in Sikh history.

Sultanpur Lodhi, a town of great historical and spiritual significance, is deeply rooted in the early life of Guru Nanak Dev Ji. It was here that Guru Nanak received his divine revelation, setting the foundation for the teachings of Sikhism. The enduring legacy of Sultanpur Lodhi in promoting the values of spirituality and equality is aligned with the work of the Sikh Family Centre. Through its efforts, the centre ensures that the teachings of Sikhism continue to guide future generations.
